Detailed Syllabus Information

Course Subtitle	East Asian Politics
Language of the Course	English
Type of Class	Lecture Subject
Course Objective	The countries of East Asia offer a large variety of political structures that affect the way they interact with their citizens and with each other. This course serves as a broad survey of their constitutional, legal, and electoral systems as they relate to the workings of the government and the activities of their civil societies. To cover as much as possible, this course divides the countries of the region within a typology of regimes: closed autocracies, electoral authoritarianism, defective democracies, and stable democracies. This course also looks at the region as a whole, concerning the formation of regional ties and the protection of their peoples.
Learning Goals	(1) Knowledge: After taking this course, students will be able to understand the political conditions in different countries of East Asia and the way they affect the citizens. (2) Skills: After taking this course, students will be able to recognize the meaning of emerging policies and development issues in the region.
