Detailed Syllabus Information
Course Subtitle / 授業サブタイトル	Primateology in Japan
Language of the Course / 開講言語	English
Learning Methods / 学習方法	Listening and watching face-to-face/online class: Listening and watching a lecture, video, or demonstration, face-to-face or via online (e.g., attending a face-to-face lecture, watching an on-demand video) Reading: Reading books and academic papers (e.g., summarizing an academic paper, reading information on a website)
Course Objectives / 授業の目的と概要	The course will focus on scientific research on biology and behavior of nonhuman primates (prosimians, monkeys, apes), with emphasis on the contributions of Japanese primatologists and collaborators. Students will learn about taxonomic relationships and the geographic distribution of primates, their socio-ecological strategies, social systems, communication, and cognitive abilities. Observational and experimental studies of these and related phenomena will be reviewed and analyzed.
Learning Goals / 学習目標	1 The course aims to help students acquire knowledge about the evolution of primates -- their structures, and their social and nonsocial behavior, and the challenges they face to survive in various environments. Japan-based scientists have historically played a prominent role in this scientific field, and continue to do so. Students will become familiar with their findings.
Requirements, Prerequisites / 履修条件・受講条件	None
Attendance and Student Conduct Policy / 出欠席及び受講に関するルール	Students are expected to attend classes and to read recommended readings. They are also encouraged to supplement their reading with independently sourced materials.

		consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
3rd	Title:Early influential studies on primates I
	Some important people and early research
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
4th	Title:Early influential studies on primates II
	The increasing interest in studying primates. The origins of Japanese primatology
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
5th	Title:Early influential studies on primates III
	The "modern" era. "Ape-language" projects
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
6th	Title:Habitats
	Where and how do primates live?
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
7th	Title:Diets
	Foraging (finding food), and what primates eat
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).

	Home ranges, core areas, territories. Mating systems
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
10th	Title:Communication I
	Visual and tactile signals
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
11th	Title:Communication II
	Olfactory and auditory signals
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
12th	Title:Dominance
	Factors influencing dominance rank, power relationships
	Instructor:
	Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
13th	Title:Intelligence
	Examples of studies of primate learning and cognition. What are the origins of primate intelligence?
	Instructor:

		Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
	14th	Title:Tool-use
		The significance (and limitations) of primates' abilities to use tools to solve problems
		Instructor:
		Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
	15th	Title:Recent research in primatology
		Four recent papers selected from primatology journals
		Instructor:
		Independent Study Outside of Class:Students should study the lecture handouts for each class, and consult other relevant sources (books, journal articles, appropriate websites).
	16th	Title:End-of-term exam
		End-of-term exam
