Course Objectives / 授業の目的と 概要	The promotion of ethics and the prevention of crime in the public and private spheres has gained increasing attention over the past few decades due to their implications to national and international development. However, concerns about crime from an individual and social perspectives can be found throughout history, with only the recent application of scienfitic inquiry able to provide structure to an otherwise complex phenomenon. In line with the multifaceted nature of both ethics and crime, this course provides a broad review of the major issues and debates in the field from a fundamentally cross-disciplinary perspective. To offer students a comprehensive understanding of the topic, this course covers philosophical views, social norms, legal systems, and political processes that provides us with the tools to explore the causes of crime and the ways in which modern societies deal with it.
Learning Goals / 学習目標	1	 (1) Knowledge: After taking this course, students will be able to understand the way in which ethics and morality shape modern societies, as well as the complex nature of crime in its different forms. (2) Skills: After taking this course, students will be able to recognize the ethical implications of criminal conduct and assess its causes, consequences, and the available methods of control.
