Warning!
Special
Fraud

Examples of Fraudulent Schemes

Scammers may impersonate police officers, city officials, immigration officers or other figures of authority, contacting individuals by phone or even visiting their homes.

They may attempt to create a sense of urgency and fear by showing fake police identification or arrest warrants.

Under the pretext of investigating your account or preventing money laundering, they may ask you to hand over your cash card and bank book, or instruct you to transfer funds to a specific account via ATM or online banking.

To avoid Special Fraud

- If you encounter a situation that seems suspicious or makes you uncomfortable, please hang up the phone immediately, do not allow anyone into your home, and contact your family, the university, or the police .
- Please remember that legitimate police officers and city officials will never ask for your cash card, bank book , or PIN, nor will they demand money transfers.
- We encourage you to be mindful of your online presence and avoid sharing personal information* on SNS.
*Do not give the third-party your personal and shared information among your various groups such as names, phone numbers and e-mail addresses without consent.
- It's also helpful to discuss these safety tips with your family and stay informed about fraud prevention measures.
